The ALA West of England Region invites you to its Winter Seminar at the Royal Agricultural University, Cirencester.

As the development of a new agriculture and environmental policy progresses and succession related matters continue to dominate the sector, the means of resolving disputes in a cost-effective manner without recourse to court procedures will increase in their relevance.

The seminar will consider the benefits and issues arising for practitioners when using arbitration and mediation approaches as two methods of dispute resolution.

Speakers

Simon Pallett, Chairman, Carter Jonas

Simon is based in the Winchester office and advises clients throughout southern England on a wide range of rural property, valuation and management issues. His expertise includes farm and estate management, buying/selling farms and estates, valuations, landlord and tenant issues, planning and development and diversification. He is an appointed agent and valuer to the AMC and an accredited rural arbitrator to the RICS panel with extensive experience of dispute resolution acting for both landlords and tenants.

Duncan Elson, Partner, Charles Russell Speechlys

Duncan is the Head of the firm's Litigation & Dispute Resolution Division and is also Head of the Guildford office. He has over 30 years of practice covering a wide range of High Court Litigation, mediation and alternative dispute resolutions. His client base ranges from private individuals to charitable and corporate entities. His work centres around trusts and estates (both contentious and as a professional trustee/executor and also as a Court appointed Administrator and Deputy) and family business restructuring and related shareholder issues.

He is listed as a leading individual in Chambers, Legal 500 and Citywealth.
